Fill in so that the text makes sense: book:

The British as a nation do all kinds of things in their spare time: they go shopping or jogging, they play darts or football, they collect records or stamps, they go to church or to the pub. The average working person has 40 hours of free time a week, sleeps for 49 hours, spends 45 hours at work or travelling to and from work. The remaining hours are spent on "essential activities" (food shopping, housework, child care, cooking etc.)
