Love sees no colour

3

Being adopted is complicated enough, but it's even trickier when you are black and your family is white. Laura Thompson describes her life.

7. About 12 months ago I started going out with my first boyfriend, Paul. No one had ever asked me out before. Sure, I was friendly with a lot of boys, but it was as if they never really thought of me when it came to romance. Now I realise that they were probably scared that their mates or their parents would be horrified if they went out with me - there was, when it came down to it, a lot of hidden racism in our town.

8. I realised I needed to find out more about myself and about the place I came from. With the help of my "white" mum, I wrote to my natural mother, who wrote back with family photos, telling me all about herself. Even though I'm not close to my real mum, we still keep in touch - her letters have helped me to understand a part of myself better, and also where I come from, biologically.

9. One of my new friends, Rose, is a black girl from a Jamaican family. I often go to her house and chat with her family. I feel I can talk to them about what's like being a black person - something I haven't ever been able to share with my "white" family.

10. I now know I'm not on my own. I accept and enjoy my "whiteness" and my "blackness". I don't feel like the odd one out any more - but I do feel very special.

accept	[ək'sept]	přijmout, akceptovat
ask sb. out		= začít s někým chodit
hide (hid, hidden)	[haid, hid, hidn]	= skrýt

keep in touch			udržovat kontakt
mate	[meɪt]	=	druh, přítel, kamarád
odd one out			stojící stranou
on my own			sám
realise	['ri:əlaɪz]	=	uvědomit si
share	[ʃeə]		dělit se, sdílet

3. Read again "Love sees no colour", then answer the questions:

7. What does Laura say about her love life in paragraph 7 ?

- A) Boys thought that she didn't want a serious relationship.
- B) She never has much contact with boys, black or white.
- C) She thinks that white boys were afraid to be seen with her.
- D) She was afraid to go out with boys until she met Paul.

8. What does Laura say about her contact with her natural mother in paragraph 8?

- A) It has given Laura more insight into herself and her background.
- B) It has made Laura's relationship with her adoptive mother less warm.
- C) It has set Laura thinking about going to live with her natural mother.
- D) It has made Laura interested in race relations.

9. What can be concluded about Laura from paragraphs 9 and 10?

- A) She feels that she neither fits in with black nor with white people now.
- B) She has come to see the positive sides of her specific situation.
- C) She now has more contact with black people than with white people.
- D) She still has to get used to the idea of being a black girl in a white family.

4. True or false?	TRUE	FALSE
