EASTER IN GREAT BRITAIN I.

Pramen: Časopis Bridge

Unlike the Czech Republic, in Britain many Easter traditions have been forgotten, but there is still one that has survived. Easter does not mean only Easter Sunday and Easter Monday, but Good Friday as well. In Britain this day is connected with hot cross buns. In the old days, people used to eat them for breakfast on Good Friday, but nowadays they are eaten practically at any time during the week before Easter.

Hot cross buns are sweet buns, containing dried fruit and spices. The baker, before he puts them into the oven, marks them with a cross to remind us of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ on the first Good Friday in the history of Good Fridays. The buns are usually toasted and eaten hot with butter. They are crispy, warm and delicious

7. Read and act the dialogue:

Two girls, Jane and Kate, are talking about Easter:

Jane is an English girl, Kate is Czech.

Jane: How many Easter eggs do you have, Kate?

Kate: I have five. The red one is for my father, the blue one is for my brother, the yellow one is for my friend Tom, the green one is for my friend John and the orange one is for my friend Mike.

Jane: Do the boys always spank you with a rod on Easter Monday?

Kate: Yes, they do. And the girls give them Easter eggs. And sometimes they drench boys after lunch.

Jane: It must be fun!

Kate: Yes, it is! This year you can try it, too!
